NO:

In cases where the parent does not inform the school, the school will usually be able to identify a child with special needs. The parent is then asked to come for another meeting with the Management Team. This interview is conducted by the Inclusion Team who will determine the level of the special need. In cases where the school would be in a position to accommodate the child, admission is granted. In other cases, the parents are advised to seek admission in a school where the child's needs can be better met.
